DETAILED ACTION

Petition to Make Special

1. A Petition to Make Special, filed under 37 CFR 1.102 on 4 August 2003, has been received, and will be entered and considered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

2. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

3. Claims 1 and 35 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter. The claimed invention is not within the technological arts. See para. 5-8 below.
4. A "processor" reads on technology. Hence this rejection could be overcome by respectively incorporating claims 2 and 36 into 1 and 35.
5. As an initial matter, the United States Constitution under Art. I, §8, cl. 8 gave Congress the power to "[p]romote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries". In carrying out this power, Congress authorized under 35 U.S.C. §101 a grant of a patent to "[w]hoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition or matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof." Therefore, a fundamental premise is that a patent is a statutorily created vehicle for Congress to confer an exclusive right to the inventors for "inventions" that promote the progress of "science and the useful arts". The phrase "technological arts" has been created and used by the courts to offer another view of the term "useful arts". See In re Musgrave, 167 USPQ (BNA) 280 (CCPA 1970). Hence, the first test of whether an invention is eligible for a patent is to determine if the invention is within the "technological arts".
6. Further, despite the express language of §101, several judicially created exceptions have been established to exclude certain subject matter as being patentable subject matter covered by §101. These exceptions include "laws of nature", "natural phenomena", and "abstract ideas". See Diamond v. Diehr, 450, U.S. 175, 185, 209 USPQ (BNA) 1, 7 (1981). However, courts have found that even if an invention incorporates abstract ideas, such as mathematical algorithms, the invention may nevertheless be statutory subject matter if the invention as a whole produces a "useful, concrete and tangible result." See State Street Bank & Trust Co. v. Signature Financial Group, Inc. 149 F.3d 1368, 1973, 47 USPQ2d (BNA) 1596 (Fed. Cir. 1998).

7. This "two prong" test was evident when the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals (CCPA) decided an appeal from the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences (BPAI). See In re Toma, 197 USPQ (BNA) 852 (CCPA 1978). In Toma, the court held that the recited mathematical algorithm did not render the claim as a whole non-statutory using the Freeman-Walter-Abele test as applied to Gottschalk v. Benson, 409 U.S. 63, 175 USPQ (BNA) 673 (1972). Additionally, the court decided separately on the issue of the "technological arts". The court developed a "technological arts" analysis:

The "technological" or "useful" arts inquiry must focus on whether the claimed subject matter...is statutory, not on whether the product of the claimed subject matter...is statutory, not on whether the prior art which the claimed subject matter purports to replace...is statutory, and not on whether the claimed subject matter is presently perceived to be an improvement over the prior art, e.g., whether it "enhances" the operation of a machine. In re Toma at 857.

In Toma, the claimed invention was a computer program for translating a source human language (e.g., Russian) into a target human language (e.g., English). The court found that the claimed computer implemented process was within the "technological art" because the claimed invention was an operation being performed by a computer within a computer.

8. The decision in State Street Bank & Trust Co. v. Signature Financial Group, Inc. never addressed this prong of the test. In State Street Bank & Trust Co., the court found that the "mathematical exception" using the Freeman-Walter-Abele test has little, if any, application to determining the presence of statutory subject matter but rather, statutory subject matter should be based on whether the operation produces a "useful, concrete and tangible result". See State Street Bank & Trust Co. at 1374. Furthermore, the court found that there was no "business method exception" since the court decisions that purported to create such exceptions were based on novelty or lack of enablement issues and not on statutory grounds. Therefore, the court held that "[w]hether the patent's claims are too broad to be patentable is not to be judged under §101, but rather under §§102, 103 and 112." See State Street Bank & Trust Co. at 1377. Both of these analysis goes towards whether the claimed invention is non-statutory because of the presence of an abstract idea. Indeed, State Street abolished the Freeman-Walter-Abele test used in Toma. However, State Street never addressed the second part of the analysis, i.e., the "technological arts" test established in Toma because the invention in State Street (i.e., a computerized system for determining the year-end income, expense, and capital gain or loss for the portfolio) was already determined to be within the technological arts under the Toma test. This dichotomy has been recently acknowledged by the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences (BPAI) in affirming a §101 rejection finding the claimed invention to be non-statutory. See Ex parte Bowman, 61 USPQ2d (BNA) 1669 (BdPatApp&Int 2001).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102 and 35 USC § 103

9. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

10. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

11. Claims 1-8, 10-12, 14-18, 22, 24-25, 27-30, 32-40, 42-45 and 48 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by Lidman.
12. Lidman teaches (independent claims 1, 17, 24, 33, 35 and 43) a method and a system, the method comprising: providing a member, at least one higher education account, and at least one merchant offering discount coupons, which reads on a rebate; calculating (col. 3 lines 5-6) said coupon rebate on purchases made by at least said member from at least one merchant; and crediting said at least one higher education account (col. 1 lines 26-46). For claims 17 and 35, Lidman teaches a processor at col. 3 line 51 and the bank communication system 120 (col. 2 line 67 to col. 3 line 3) reads on the "rebate network manager", "computer network" and "tracking entity". For claims 24, 33 and 43, Lidman teaches multiple accounts (col. 1 line 65, col. 2 lines 41-42 ad Fig. 1) and electronically transferring information into them (col. 3 lines 10-15), which reads on a memory device comprising member higher education accounts.

13. Lidman also teaches at the citations given above claims 2-5, 7-8, 10-11, 15, 28, 30, 36-38, 40, 42, 45 and 48.
14. Lidman also teaches at the citations given above claims 16, 29, 39 and 44, where the bank communication system 120 reads on a registration organization, which inherently must be paid (receives a portion of said rebate).
15. Lidman also teaches: a college fund savings account (claims 6, 18, 22, 25 and 34, at col. 1 line 26-31 and 55); claims 12 and 27 (col. 3 line 38); and claims 14 and 32 (col. 2 line 43, which teaches a cash register 110, which reads on an on-site merchant).
16. Claims 9, 13, 19-21, 23, 26, 31, 41 and 46-47 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Lidman.
17. Lidman does not teach that (claims 9, 26 and 47) the rebate is from 1% to 30% of the price of said purchases or (claims 13, 31, 41 and 46) purchases made on-line. Official notice is taken (MPEP § 2144.03) that coupon rebates were commonly within the range of 1% to 30% at the time of the invention, and that on-line purchasing was also well known % at the time of the invention.
18. Lidman does not teach (claims 19-20) a student loan payment account, (claim 21) an educational IRA or (claim 23) a college charitable contribution account. Because these accounts support education, and would therefore attract business to participating merchants, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time of the invention, to add these kinds of accounts to the teachings of Lidman.
